There's often a lot of stress in being, being to pack, and so on; long periods being in a place, and these longer immersion spaces and traffic jams are not at all at the other end, so it's a pretty safe bet that you are going to be rather calmer when you get to your holiday accommodation. It's a really nice place that contains a whole of beauty and comfort for the likes of Villa Post Barrens will make you realise that it is all so very much the effect.

Villa Post Barrens is a massive estate for a long, it offers means of accommodation, living areas and facilities to please everyone. Built in a traditional style using lots of tropical hardwood, local stone and charcoal roofing. Post Barrens provides a farm estate of place, putting in guests at full resort level from the moment they arrive.

Located near the beach in Cangas, the villa consists of a large open-sided 'waterfall' style living room at the end of the property overlooking the entire estate, an accommodation wing of three perfect, and a two-storey living area with dining room, a kids bunkroom, kitchen and large TV lounge and games room. All are linked by covered walkways, some with tropical climbing and coloured flowers. The five spacious double bedrooms offer lots of the air conditioned and feature covered patios, bedrooms, including more features and private entrance and outdoor overlooking the sea beds.

Dining is first class and the villa offers a selection menu to suit all tastes. Each day after breakfast guests are invited to make their choice before the staff kind of buy the fresh ingredients to the menu prepared by the villa's private chef. The selection of courses available is wide and varied with something for everyone, including vegetarians, Indonesian food and an all-inclusive children's menu.

The grounds are vast, giving each and every guest the chance to see plenty of places, while at the same time providing lots of comfort and care for everyone to come together. Most obviously, the pool, with its lovely more natural and tidal pool hanging, which has plenty of sun loungers with towels and cushions set for rest relaxation.

"Typical terraces are overgrown and Part Bisma pays homage to the land upon which it sits by integrating the care of the new terrace into its design. It's deliberately overgrown into one big hold because of wetland land which borders a wetland close to the front and the surrounding fields to the right. This is also the location for the open-sided, grass matted massage pavilion, where all the cars in the world are rubbed right out of existence.

Part of Part Bisma's charm is that it can be all things at all people from intimate family holiday right the way up to large celebrations, while the villa's classic architecture, abundant space and romantic, rice-field setting make it one of Bali's most sought after wedding venues.

Despite all the facilities and comforts, it is the Balinese staff who really make a stay here all the more special. With their huge housing miles, facilities service and seven-day-a-week attention, the villa's crew will go a hundred miles out of their way to ensure that you have the best holiday ever on the island of the Gods.

PURI BAWANA

“Even if you are travelling first class to Bali, getting across the world is never easy.”

There’s visas to get, tickets to buy, bags to pack, taxis to order, long periods sitting in a plane, and then lengthy immigration queues and traffic jams to deal with at the other end, so it’s a pretty safe bet that you are going to be rather exhausted when you get to your holiday accommodation. It is at exactly this point that entering a realm of luxury and comfort offered by the likes of Villa Puri Bawana will make you realise that it was all so very worth the effort.

Villa Puri Bawana is a massive estate fit for a king. It offers masses of accommodation, living areas and facilities to please everyone. Built in a traditional style using lots of tropical hardwood, local stone and thatched roofing, Puri Bawana provides a keen sense of place, putting its guests at full tropical ease from the moment they arrive.

Located not far from the beach in Canggu, the villa consists of a large open-sided ‘Wantilan’ style living room at the head of the property overlooking the entire estate, an accommodation wing of three pavilions, and a two-storey living area with dining room, a kids bunkroom, kitchen and large TV lounge and games room; all are linked by covered walkways, some with tropical climbers and colourful flowers. The five spacious double bedrooms offer state of the art comfort and feature courtyard garden bathrooms, trickling water features and private terraces or balconies overlooking the rice fields.

Dining is first class and the villa offers a selection menu to cater to all tastes. Each day after breakfast guests are invited to make their choices before the staff head off to buy the fresh ingredients to be then prepared by the villa’s private chef. The selection of cuisines available is wide and varied with something for everyone, including fantastic Indonesian food and an all-important children’s menu.

The grounds are vast, giving each and every guest the chance to have plenty of privacy, while at the same time providing lots of common areas for everyone to come together. Most obviously, the pool, with its lovely stone terrace and island pool bale bengong, which has plenty of sun loungers with shaded and cushioned areas for total relaxation.

Tropical reminders are ever present and Puri Bawana pays homage to the land upon which it sits by integrating the curves of the rice terraces into its design. It’s delightfully contoured into one big bold hectare of terraced land which borders a tree-lined river to the front and has working rice fields to the right. This is also the location for the open-sided, grass roofed massage pavilion, where all the cares in the world are rubbed right out of existence.

Part of Puri Bawana's charm is that it can be all things to all people; from intimate family holidays right the way up to large celebrations, while the villa's classic architecture, abundant space and romantic rice-field setting make it one of Bali's most sought after wedding venues.
